Society Web Site and E-mail List Established

The Society for Hindu-Christian Studies now has a web site managed by the Society's vice-president, Lance Nelson, using the University of San Diego computer system. The site can be reached at the following address: <http://www.acusd.edu/theo/hcs-l>

The Society's web site will provide easy access for members and the general Internet public to information about membership in the Society, the Hindu-Christian Studies Bulletin, our annual meeting program, and other activities. There is also a page for "Hindu-Christian Studies Links", containing references to other sites that may be of interest to members and subscribers. (If you know of any good links that would be appropriate, please forward the URLs to the list manager.)

The web site also provides information on HCS-L, the society's new e-mail list. The HCS-L mailing list has been set up to provide a forum in which persons trained in disciplines relating to Hindu-Christian studies may exchange ideas and information across the Internet on matters pertaining to their academic interests, research, and teaching. The list currently has about 60 subscribers.

HCS-L is a private mailing list, which means that the list is not open to the general Internet public. Subscriptions are restricted to members of the Society for Hindu-Christian Studies and other subscribers to the Hindu-Christian Studies Bulletin. Exceptions will be considered only in special circumstances. This policy is intended to help ensure that the discussion remains as much as possible on an informed, scholarly level.

For further information on the HCS-L, please visit the Society's web site or contact Lance Nelson at lnelson@acusd.edu.

Other News

NAINConnect'97 at University of South Carolina

Hindu-Christian dialogue operates within a wider setting of discourse between various religions. A case in point is Columbia, South Carolina. The local interfaith group, Partners in Dialogue, was inaugurated in 1992 with a conference numbering some 500 persons, in anticipation of the Centennial of the Parliament of Religions. It has continued in a rather unique way, being sponsored by an academic unit, the Department of Religious Studies at the University of South Carolina. Dr Carl Evans, Chair of the Department, is also Director of Partners. From the start, the lively Hindu community, numbering some 500 families with an active temple, have demonstrated their belief in a larger spiritual unity by their strong participation in Partners in Dialogue. Christianity, clearly the most populous faith community, is well represented, but other participant groups on the Steering Committee include Judaism, Islam, Buddhism, Unitarianism, and the Bahá'ís.

The vital participation of the Hindu community in Partners in Dialogue was one factor in the decision of the North American Interfaith Network (NAIN) to hold its annual meeting, NAINConnect '97, at the University of South Carolina from 7 to 10 August. It is important for the local group to have wider connections, and we are glad to be able to host this event, which met last year in Dallas, and will meet next year in Edmonton.

The Hindu community has also given great impetus to a major research project, the production of the Encyclopedia of Hinduism. The first planning meeting of this project was held in Columbia in 1988, and now the central offices have moved here. Dr K. L. Seshagiri Rao, Chief Editor of the Encyclopedia, is in residence in Columbia. Dr Kaushal Sinha, a local orthopedic surgeon, is its CEO, and others from the Hindu community and the University are very deeply involved. Again, the Department of Religious Studies and the University have helped to provide space and resources for this venture housed at the University. Sponsorship of this research initiative by the Department is undertaken in the belief that our deeper understanding of any religious tradition may promote enlightened dialogue between many such traditions.

Columbia has established international interfaith connections in several ways. Dr Rao has been for some years co-editor of the journal now called World Faiths Encounter, of the World Congress of Faiths, based primarily in England. Dr Rao, and Dr Hal French of the Department are also international consultants for the International Interfaith Centre in Oxford, England. Marcus Braybrooke, one of the trustees of the Centre, was the keynote speaker for the first meeting of Partners in Dialogue in Columbia, and will serve again in that role for the NAINConnect'97 here in August, 1997.

In each of these situations, locally, in North America, and internationally, the Hindu and Christian communities have helped to stimulate awareness of their own need for dialogue, and to engage in wider possibilities for interfaith dialogue.

The Destiny of the Soul, A Vaisnava-Christian Conference.

Nineteen people (ten Vaisnava and nine Christian) participated in a conference on the Destiny of the Soul held at the Cathedral Conference Center in East Freeport, Freetown, MA, 20-21 September 1996

Dialogue among the participants centred on five topics: metaphysical and epistemological aspects of the questions of the soul's destiny; linguistic issues; social relevance; spiritual beliefs; and issues related to death. The schedule also included periods of shared worship.

A report on the conference by Francis X. Clooney along with text of the opening papers on the conference theme "the destiny of the soul", by Klaus Klostermaier and Tamil Krishna Goswami, is contained in ISKCON Communications Journal, Vol. 4, No.2, pp.71-94.

Hindu-Christian Workshop

Issues in Hindu-Christian Relations is a 61-page report of the workshop organized by the National Council of Churches in India, Madurai Kamraj University, and the World Council of Churches, held during October 1995, the International Year of Tolerance.

The workshop attracted 40 participants (five of whom were women), divided almost equally between Hindus and Christians.

The growing tension between Hindu and Christian communities was the key issue that provoked frank and insightful discussion. Other presentations summarized in the report include those dealing with claims of the uniqueness of a particular religion, the problem of conversion, the avatar-incarnation distinction, the equality of religions, and religion as a political tool.

A joint statement outlines the hopes and challenges that emerged during the workshop and lists a number of guiding principles for Hindus and Christians as they pursue dialogue and interreligious understanding at the levels of school, college, university, village, town and city, and at the national level.

The report, compiled by Abraham Oommen, and A. Pushparajan, is published by Unit-1, National Council of Churches in India, Post Box No. 205, Civil Lines, Nagpur 440001.
